“Philosophy, beginning in wonder, as Plato and Aristotle said, is able to fancy everything different from what it is. It sees the familiar as if it were strange, and the strange as if it were familiar. It can take things up and lay them down again….It rouses us from our native dogmatic slumber and breaks up our caked prejudices….To have some contact with it, to catch its influence, is thus good for both literary and scientific students. By its poetry it appeals to literary minds; but its logic stiffens them up and remedies their softness. By its logic it appeals to the scientific; but softens them by its other aspects, and saves them from too dry a technicality. Both types of student ought to get from philosophy a livelier spirit, more air, more mental background. (William James, from "Philosophy and Its Critics")

MORE ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Upon acceptance, students are allowed to take some graduate-level courses during their remaining semesters of undergraduate study. Up to defined limits, such classes may count BOTH towards satisfying requirements of the BA major and the MH Master’s in Humanities. Ideally arranged, a student could take 5 dual-counted courses so that by the time of BA completion. They are approximately half-way done with their graduate degree.

This program is intended for outstanding undergraduate Philosophy majors who have demonstrated graduate-level academic skills and can do graduate-quality work as undergraduates.
