ASA WEBINAR
Succeeding as a First-Generation College Student in Sociology

This is an ASA Exclusive Webinar for Undergraduate Students in ASA Department Affiliates on December 9, 3:30-4:30 p.m. Eastern. Are you a sociology student who is the first in your family to attend college? Colleges and universities can sometimes be unwelcoming, lacking the support systems first-gen students need to build community and obtain mentorship. This webinar, "First-Gen and Proud: Succeeding as a First-Generation College Student in Sociology", is designed to discuss the unique assets and challenges of first-generation college students, offer an overview of sociological research on first-gen students, and provide tips and strategies to help you navigate the landscape of higher education. Panelists are all experts who have researched and have firsthand experience with first-gen issues: Bedelia Richards (University of Richmond), Jenny Stuber (University of North Florida), and Tabitha Wilbur (Indiana University). Closed captions provided; register here.